"Antidotes or Ambiguity? Understanding the Use of Uridine Triacetate and Glucarpidase in Chemotherapy Toxicity"

Session Date: 05/28/2024

Session Time: 11:00 – 11:45 AM (CST)

Target Audience

This continuing education (CE) session was planned to meet the needs of professional staff who deal with the selection and monitoring of medication(s) as part of their patient care duties, including pharmacists, RNs, APRNs, PAs, MDs.

Activity Overview

Chemotherapy remains a cornerstone in cancer treatment, yet its efficacy is often accompanied by significant toxicity. Uridine triacetate and glucarpidase are FDA approved for managing chemotherapy-induced toxicity associated with capecitabine/fluorouracil and methotrexate, respectively. However, despite being recognized as safe and effective, the utilization of these antidotes has been precluded by cost and time restrictions. This presentation will review the literature supporting uridine triacetate and glucarpidase use in current practice while also discussing the appropriate utilization of these antidotes in various patient scenarios, identifying situations where their use is supported and when they should be avoided.

Learning Objectives

At the conclusion of this knowledge-based CE session, participants should be able to:

1. Recognize the common toxicities associated with capecitabine/fluorouracil and methotrexate.
2. Describe current literature assessing uridine triacetate and glucarpidase in managing chemotherapy toxicity.
3. Determine the appropriateness of using uridine triacetate and glucarpidase in various patient scenarios, considering efficacy, safety, and patient-specific factors.
